Grow Remote is rolling out a new project to support social enterprises based in rural Ireland to take full advantage of the opportunities remote working can provide.

There are more than 80,000 remote jobs available in Ireland today, and that number is growing every month.

Remote work offers an untapped opportunity for people of all backgrounds and abilities, including members of minority and marginalised communities, to break down barriers to the workforce and secure good quality employment, regardless of their location.

We will deliver this project in collaboration with The Wheel and Laois-Offaly Education and Training Board. It is funded by Rethink Ireland, Google.org and the Department of Rural and Community Development as part of the Rural Recovery Fund.

About this project

We are inviting you to learn how to transition your rural social enterprise to a remote or hybrid model by providing training in remote working skills and best practice in remote working.

It is an 8 week, fully-funded course (no cost to you or your organisation), and will involve 3-4 hours per week of your time. The course is fully online, with a self-paced online learning portion and a weekly live Zoom call with a course facilitator.

Additional support will also be provided as you progress through the course, and we will be engaging and collaborating with you throughout the journey.

We will also work with you to build a playbook, which will be a useful resource for all other social enterprises working with disadvantaged communities.

This is a fully-funded opportunity and places are limited. We are delighted to invite leaders in your organisation to partner with us on this exciting journey.

Impact for your clients

The overall aim of this project is to enable the people you work with to find and secure rewarding remote jobs.

Once you have completed this training course, you will be trained in remote work best practice and, in turn, you will be equipped to upskill your community and support them in finding a great remote job, regardless of location. This will have many positive impacts on their lives and in all of our communities.

In addition, the people you work with will have the opportunity to go further and enroll in our Remote Work Ready course to give them even more support on their remote working journey.
